BASTAR'S DIWALI

A VICTORY OVER FEAR, A NEW DAWN OF PEACE

PM Modi's Historic Celebration with Security Forces Sends a Powerful Message of National Unity

The End of Maoist Violence Must Mark the Beginning of Lasting Development, Justice and Prosperity in India's Tribal Heartland

Diwali 2026 will occupy a special place in India's internal security history. Prime Minister Narendra Modi's decision to celebrate the festival of lights with security personnel at the CoBRA Operations Base in Karanpur, Bastar, Chhattisgarh, was more than a ceremonial gesture. It symbolised the transformation of a region once synonymous with Maoist violence, insecurity and developmental isolation into a landscape of renewed national hope.““Addressing security personnel, the Prime Minister declared that this was the first Diwali when every district in India was free from Naxalism. His announcement represented a significant milestone in the country's decades-long struggle against Left-Wing Extremism. However, the true significance of this achievement must be measured not merely by the decline of armed insurgency, but by the lasting peace and prosperity it brings to affected communities.““Honouring the Guardians of National Security““For decades, security forces have operated under extraordinarily difficult conditions across India's Maoist-affected regions. Personnel from the CRPF, CoBRA, BSF, ITBP, state police and specialised units have demonstrated remarkable courage while confronting ambushes, landmines and armed attacks.““Their sacrifices deserve the nation's enduring gratitude. While millions celebrated Diwali with their families, security personnel continued safeguarding communities and defending national stability. The Prime Minister's celebration with them conveyed an important message: internal security is as essential to national progress as the protection of international borders.““Yet, this victory must also acknowledge the suffering of innocent civilians, tribal families and communities whose lives were disrupted by prolonged violence.““From Security Operations to Sustainable Development““The weakening of Maoist extremism presents an extraordinary opportunity to transform Bastar and other previously affected regions.““For generations, remote tribal communities have struggled with inadequate roads, limited healthcare, educational deprivation, unemployment and administrative neglect. Restoring security creates opportunities for development, but cannot replace development itself.““The government must now prioritise quality education, accessible healthcare, employment generation, reliable infrastructure and meaningful economic opportunities.““Equally important is safeguarding tribal land rights, cultural identity, traditional livelihoods and constitutional protections. Development cannot be considered successful unless local communities become active participants in shaping their own future.““Democracy Must Replace the Politics of Fear““The disappearance of organised violence does not automatically eliminate the grievances that contributed to extremism. Poverty, inequality, unresolved land disputes and limited access to justice require sustained institutional attention.““Effective rehabilitation of former insurgents, transparent governance, stronger local democratic institutions and accountability in public administration must become central priorities.““Peace must be accompanied by public confidence in constitutional governance. People who endured decades of insecurity deserve not only protection from violence but also dignity, opportunity and meaningful participation in democracy.““Let the Light Reach Every Tribal Village““Bastar's Diwali sends an inspiring message of national resilience. Nevertheless, this achievement must transcend political celebrations and become a lasting commitment to inclusive progress.““The ultimate victory over Maoist extremism will not be determined by official declarations alone. It will be visible when every child can attend school without fear, every family can access healthcare, every young person can pursue a dignified livelihood and every tribal village enjoys the benefits of democracy.““The silence of guns may signify the end of conflict, but the arrival of education, justice, opportunity and human dignity will signify the beginning of genuine peace.““That must be Bastar's greatest Diwali victory — and India's most meaningful tribute to its brave security personnel. The courage of security personnel cannot be confined to political narratives, nor should the welfare of affected communities become a matter of partisan competition.““Successive administrations, security institutions, local communities and civil society have all played roles in confronting the challenges posed by Left-Wing Extremism.““Recognising the sacrifices of security forces must go hand in hand with remembering civilian victims, supporting bereaved families and protecting the dignity of people who endured prolonged insecurity.““For the nation, the occasion offers an opportunity to express gratitude while reaffirming its commitment to peace, justice and inclusive development.““Let the Light of Peace Reach Every Village““The most meaningful legacy of Modi's Diwali celebration in Bastar will not be determined solely by the symbolism of the Prime Minister standing alongside security personnel in a former conflict zone.““It will be determined by what happens in the years ahead.““Will remote tribal villages receive dependable healthcare and quality education? Will young people have access to employment? Will democratic institutions become stronger? Will the communities that suffered through decades of violence finally experience security, dignity and prosperity?““These are the questions that must shape the next phase of governance.““India has every reason to honour the courage and sacrifice of its security forces. Their determination has created an opportunity for a better future in regions long burdened by conflict.““But the responsibility of the nation does not end with celebrating a security achievement. It extends to ensuring that peace is preserved, justice is accessible and development reaches every household.““The true victory over Naxalism will be complete not merely when the sound of gunfire disappears from the forests, but when the light of education, opportunity, democracy and human dignity illuminates every village of Bastar.““That would be the finest tribute to India's brave security personnel — and the most meaningful celebration of Diwali.

Brutal murder for money in Chhattisgarh

- Collection of a child's organs for online sale

- The accused committed the crime after watching videos on social media

- The barbarian killed the child after getting him drunk and slitting his throat

- Police arrested the accused and seized the organs

Chhattisgarh: Driven by the greed to earn quick money, a young man resorted to this atrocity. He brutally murdered a four-year-old boy and attempted to sell the organs online. The accused admitted to committing this horrific act under the influence of videos he saw on social media. This inhumane incident took place in the Jashpur district of Chhattisgarh. According to police details, Basudev (27), a laborer living in the Chalni Gorrapath village under the Sanna police station jurisdiction, was dissatisfied with his earnings and often searched for ways to earn easy money on social media. During this search, he came up with the idea of selling children's organs for money. On November 5, he lured his relative's four-year-old son, Jitendra Ram, to a secluded area with false promises. There, he got the boy drunk, and after he fell into a stupor, he killed him by slitting his throat with a knife. He then dismembered the boy's body, separating the kidneys, lungs, and eyes, and placed them in a plastic bucket. He wrapped the corpse in a blanket and buried it in a water pit near a cornfield. After the son went missing since November 5, his father, Ramjeet Ram, filed a complaint with the police on Saturday. During the search operations, the partially buried body was discovered in the pit on Sunday. When Basudev was taken into custody for suspicion and interrogated, he confessed to the crime. Based on the information provided by the accused, the police seized the weapons used in the murder and the bucket containing the organs. Jashpur SSP Lal Umed Singh stated that a case has been registered and an investigation is underway regarding this incident.

Speaking at a press conference following the election results, he reiterated his firm belief that "good governance leads to good politics," noting that the people have once again validated this conviction. Chandrababu observed that the public's support for the alliance has grown even stronger in these local elections compared to the 2024 general elections, while simultaneously, the YSR Congress Party has faced an even greater rejection by the electorate. He pointed out that the results clearly show that people from all walks of life—across both urban and rural areas—have stood firmly with the alliance. Whether through EVMs, ballot papers, or postal ballots, the people have consistently backed the alliance. He specifically highlighted that the YSRCP has lost almost all public support in districts such as Anakapalli, Konaseema, Kakinada, Palnadu, West Godavari, and Visakhapatnam. Chandrababu noted that the government prioritized public welfare even during challenging times, such as cyclones, and that the people have recognized the hard work put in by his administration. He added that the elections took place in a peaceful atmosphere, with citizens voluntarily casting their votes to ensure the victory of the alliance candidates. He expressed his gratitude with great humility, stating that he bows his head in respect to all the people of the state for delivering this historic victory. Up to 70% Crop Damage Reported in Conventional Farming Fields

Our Staff Reporter Pen Power|"Prakasam| November 09 : Natural farming crops have demonstrated remarkable resilience against the impact of Cyclone Murusu in Prakasam district. Despite heavy rainfall and strong winds reaching speeds of 100–110 kmph on November 3, chilli and paddy crops cultivated through natural farming methods reportedly remained largely unaffected, while chemically cultivated crops suffered significant damage.““In Purumetla village of Mundlamuru mandal, farmer Kanuku Nagabrahma Reddy cultivated 555-variety chilli on two acres using natural farming techniques. Things to do after retirement

How to stay healthy"Retirement marks the end of one's professional career, but it should not mean the end of an active life. As one ages, it is crucial to remain physically healthy, mentally sharp, and socially engaged. Experts point out that leaving the workplace does not mean one must cease to be productive. In addition to preparing financially for retirement, it is advisable to plan ahead to ensure that the subsequent phase of life is spent in good health and with enthusiasm. Thanks to modern medicine, vaccines, and antibiotics, human life expectancy has increased. However, living a long life is not enough; it is equally important to remain healthy throughout that time. Experts emphasize that the length of one's life matters less than the number of years spent in good health."A sudden shift in daily routine: For many, the daily routine changes abruptly upon retirement. The office environment, interactions with colleagues, and the demands of daily work disappear. Some people end up spending most of their time at homewatching television or using their phones—which can lead to a decline in physical activity and a loss of interest in life. Retirement should not be viewed merely as a time for the body to rest; rather, it is an opportunity to continue moving forward with a clear purpose in life. Even after the age of 60, one can lead an enthusiastic life by starting a business, engaging in voluntary work, serving the community, or pursuing hobbies that one has long wished to explore. Activities such as volunteering at temples or forming self-help groups for the elderly can also provide a new sense of purpose. Loneliness is another major challenge among the elderly; factors such as strained family relationships, a shrinking circle of friends, and limited mobility often lead to feelings of isolation. A study suggests that one in four people in urban India experiences significant loneliness. It is recommended that this issue can be mitigated by talking to friends, spending time with family, and participating in activities like walking groups, games, or social events."Keep the brain active..."It is essential to keep the brain active as one ages. Engaging in activities such as reading, learning new skills, or pursuing hobbies like photography and chess contributes to mental sharpness. While aging is a natural process, physical decline is not inevitable. Strengthening muscles, staying physically active, getting adequate sleep, and managing stress are key components of healthy aging. Since muscle strength tends to decline with age, it is important to prioritize resistance or weight-based exercises. While walking is beneficial, it is not considered a complete form of exercise. To maintain muscle mass, it is essential to incorporate strength training and ensure an adequate intake of protein. Retirement should not be viewed as the end of life, but rather as the beginning of new opportunities. By cultivating new interests, staying connected with the community, and remaining physically active, one can experience a healthy and joyful old age. Planning ahead—not just for financial security, but also for physical and mental well-being—is the key to long-term health.

KTR Labels Revanth Reddy's Government a 'Tughlaq Rule' Over Musi Project

BRS Working President Accuses Congress of Mismanaging Water Supply while Prioritizing High-Cost Riverfront Beautification Bids Without DPRs

HYDERABAD: Launching a scathing attack against the Chief Minister A. Revanth Reddy-led administration, Bharat Rashtra Samithi (BRS) Working President K.T. Rama Rao (KTR) has criticized the state government for prioritizing expensive beautification drives specifically the ?1.5 lakh crore Musi Riverfront Beautification Project at a time when Telangana is reeling under severe agricultural and drinking water shortages."Taking to social media platform X, KTR characterized the Congress administration as a "Tughlaq government," citing severe procedural lapses and misplaced administrative priorities. The BRS leader alleged that the state government pushed forward with public hearings for the Musi project without actual public involvement, while simultaneously calling project bids prior to finalizing a Detailed Project Report (DPR)."Highlighting the compounding water crisis across urban and rural belts, KTR blamed government incompetence for what he termed an "artificial drought". He argued that instead of utilizing existing lift irrigation pump sets along the Godavari and Krishna basins to fill regional reservoirs and agricultural tanks, the administration allowed hundreds of TMCs of water to flow downstream unutilized.""Public hearing without the public. Project bids being called without a DPR. And the irony of it is 'Beautification' in the middle of a drought," KTR stated, demanding an immediate pivot toward agrarian relief and drinking water security rather than multi-crore urban beautification initiatives.

He promised to resolve the issue regarding the Karimnagar dumping yard. Expressing his indignation, he remarked that those who hinder development are essentially "throwing sticks in the way" (creating obstacles). He noted that the behavior of these leaders has left contractors feeling fearful.

He warned that if they continue with such reckless, nonsensical politics, the public will chase them down and beat them. "Mark my words—I'll say it again: if you try to cause trouble for the people, the very same public will chase you down and beat you," Bandi Sanjay declared.

He remarked that the public has stood in support of a government that ensures the safety and security of every citizena reward, he noted, that no political party could ever hope to surpass. Speaking at a press conference, Chandrababu expressed his delight over the local election results, adding that the people's mandate has placed an even greater responsibility upon them. He highlighted, "In Markapuram, the alliance won all 21 ZPTC seats, and in Anakapalli, it secured all 24. Furthermore, the mayoral seat in Visakhapatnam was won with a massive margin of 2.50 lakh votes. These results prove that if one works hard for the people,

" The CM stated that the public has overwhelmingly embraced the alliance in the local body elections.“He attributed this victory to their good governance and development initiatives.“He criticized the 'axe party' (a reference to the YSRCP, alluding to the Y.S. Vivekananda Reddy murder case), stating that the people have completely rejected its politics of violence.“The CM noted that the Supreme Court thwarted the opposition's conspiracies aimed at obstructing the elections.“Chandrababu emphasized that even during cyclones, they prioritized public service above all else.

they will stand by you." Chandrababu explained that this success was made possible by the development initiatives undertaken by his government. He recalled, "We completed irrigation projects to put an end to the droughts in the Rayalaseema region. We laid the foundation stone for the Veligonda project and initiated its first phase, thereby alleviating the hardships faced by farmers. We brought Godavari waters to Anakapalli via the Polavaram left canal. With the Bhogapuram International Airport, we have given wings to the aspirations of the people of North Andhra. We also established the Markapuram district in response to the public's wishes." Chandrababu also leveled sharp criticism against the opposition YSRCP. "While we place our trust in the people and their faith, the 'Axe Party' (a derogatory reference to the YSRCP, alluding to its symbol/reputation for violence) has relied on crimes and atrocities. They incited violence during the elections and engaged in 'hit-and-run' politics, much like terrorists. However, the public will never accept the politics of violence. This is not the Stone Age; the 'Axe Party' must realize that they cannot alter the people's mandate through thuggery and theatrics," he warned. Chandrababu alleged that the YSRCP made every possible attempt to obstruct the local body elections. "They tried to stall the electoral process by filing petitions on issues like BC reservations and delimitation. But the Supreme Court put an end to their efforts. The YSR CP has stooped so low that the apex court itself remarked, 'We will not fall into the YSRCP's trap,'" he mocked. “Chandra babu further criticized the opposition, noting that when the state was hit by two cyclones, his government was fully engaged in providing relief to the people, whereas the opposition did not even bother to respond—a clear sign of their lack of faith in democracy. He emphasized that his administration prioritized addressing the people's concerns over electoral gains, and the public, recognizing this, stood in support of them.

Shri Leela's sensational decision..

Is she reducing her remuneration due to the effect of consecutive flops and a new plan?

It is difficult to predict when a heroine's career in the film industry will take a turn. If a film is a hit, opportunities queue up. However, if several films fail consecutively, there are fluctuations in opportunities. In the case of Tollywood's young heroine Shri Leela, the situation seems a bit different. Although some of the films she acted in Telugu did not achieve the expected success at the box office, this beauty is not stepping back in terms of opportunities. A century at the age of 41 – a remarkable feat by a Zimbabwean cricketer a record set in the first innings is shattered in the second!

Zimbabwean senior batter Craig Ervine has achieved a rare feat in international Test cricket, proving that age is merely a number. At the age of 41, he showcased his batting prowess by scoring a magnificent century. Ervine reached this milestone during the first Test match against Afghanistan at the Sharjah Cricket Stadium, creating history in the process. With this, he has set a new record as the oldest Zimbabwean player to score a century in the history of Test cricket.""At 41 years and 82 days old, Ervine recorded the fifth century of his Test career. Notably, he surpassed the record previously set by fellow senior player Brendan Taylor—who had achieved a similar milestone in the first innings of the same match—by delivering his own century in the second innings. Ervine has also become the second-oldest player to score a Test century in the 21st century. Former Pakistan captain Misbah-ul-Haq tops this list, having scored 114 runs against England at Lord's in 2016 at the age of 42 years and 47 days. Furthermore, with this innings, Ervine also reached the milestone of 2,000 runs in Test cricket. He became the seventh batter for Zimbabwe to cross this mark.

The film 'Scene' featuring Suriya has captivated audiences. There is a notion that Suriya must play powerful police officer roles in Tamil cinema, and the reason for this is his ability to embody and excel in such characters. Recently, Suriya has returned to the screen in a similar role with the film 'Scene', directed by Jithu Madhavan, which was released on the 6th of this month. Nazriya Nazim stars alongside him in this film. Generally, when a police officer steps into the field to catch a criminal, audiences are filled with tension about the challenges he might face. If that police officer is visually impaired, the tension escalates to the next level. The curiosity about how he will capture the criminal grows progressively. This aspect keeps the audience engaged in the film. A unique feature here is that the scene showing what the hero will do is presented by the heroine. However, in this story, the hero, heroine, and criminal are the only strong characters, while the remaining roles appear quite weak. The roles of the hero's parents and the heroine's father are particularly uninteresting and tedious. Additionally, the other police officers' roles seem to be merely nominal. If the supporting roles had been designed better, 'Scene' might not have faltered, and this content could have been heading towards success.

Gujarat's efforts for the Delhi hitter

Is the plan to give a bowler and take a batter?

It has gained momentum. In this context, it is reported that the Gujarat Titans (GT) team, led by Shubman Gill, is making serious attempts to acquire Delhi Capitals (DC) power hitter Ashutosh Sharma. Reports suggest that Gujarat is taking steps in this direction to fill the gap that has emerged in the team for a finisher. Although the Gujarat team has strong top-order batsmen like Gill, Sai Sudharsan, and Jos Buttler, there is a clear shortage of a finisher who can consistently perform in the lower order. With players like Shahrukh Khan and Rahul Tewatia not performing to expectations, GT is on the lookout for a capable player who can finish matches. In this context, they are considering acquiring Ashutosh Sharma, who has gained recognition for his destructive batting. Ashutosh scored 171 runs with a strike rate of over 180 in 8 matches last season, winning several matches single-handedly in his career. His unbeaten innings of 66 runs off 31 balls agai nst Lucknow in IPL 2025 is a testament to his ability. Just a few months ago, Gujarat Titans contacted Delhi for this trade. However, there was no immediate response from the DC management at that time. With the new management and coaching staff in Delhi now taking charge under Sourav Ganguly, it is believed that there is a possibility of reconsidering this proposal. It is reported that Gujarat is ready to give a fast bowler they have in excess to Delhi as part of this deal. Along with Gujarat, Lucknow Super Giants (LSG) is also showing interest in Ashutosh Sharma in this trade race. With the IPL trade and retention deadline ending by mid-November, there is a possibility of full clarity on player transfers in the coming days. For now, there has been no official announcementregarding this deal.
